

The crowding out effect is an economic theory that argues that rising public sector spending drives down or even eliminates private sector spending. To spend more, the government needs added revenue. It obtains it by raising taxes or by borrowing through the sale of Treasury securities

(Crowding in term used in CCE mains. Crowding out in a recent February exam)