Shekha Jheel Bird Sanctuary has been designated as India’s 99th Ramsar site, highlighting its ecological significance and role in wetland conservation. The recognition strengthens protection of its rich avifauna and biodiversity.

The move reinforces the country’s commitment to sustainable wetland management and biodiversity preservation under global conservation frameworks.

APSC Relevance: Environment, wetlands and Ramsar Convention.