The United States, China and Russia issued the four-point Shenzhen Declaration following their first-ever trilateral summit. This non-binding political statement focuses on United Nations reform, global energy stability, international legal jurisdiction and nuclear risk reduction.

The declaration seeks to strengthen diplomatic engagement among the three major powers, prevent strategic miscalculations, curb nuclear proliferation and manage geopolitical rivalry in an evolving multipolar world.

APSC Relevance: Great-Power Diplomacy, Nuclear Security